

Dialouge – My weekend

This assignment is a dialouge that you can have in a group, in your class, with your friends or with someone else.

What to do before talking

- Understand the subject. You are supposed to tell about your weekend to a friend. Include things like what you did, what was fun and if you have any plans for next weekend.
- Make it descriptive. Feel free to write down some words if it can help you describe more. What did you do? Is there a reson for why to did the mentioned things? Who was with you? Add details to describe better.
- Prepare yourself at talking. If you need to warm up your voice, you could sing some opera while you are waiting. Make sure that you sit in a comfortable space. Select a decent talking spot where you can talk without interruptions.

What to do when talking

- Be detailed and speak clear. Even if you are in a quiet locations – you need to speak clearly. And also, don't forget those details!
- Use your notes. Or just use what you have thought of as the subject, if you don't want to use notes.

What to do when listening

- No interruptions, please. Feel free to ask questions and give feedback to whoever you are talking to, but don't interrupt them in the middle of a sentence, please.
- Ask some questions. If you need more details, or just want to move the discussion forward – ask a question or two.
- Prepare what you are going to say. Maybe you did something that is the same as the one you are talking to. You can build upon that if you want.

What to do after talking

- Relax. You just talked with one or more friends, great job!
- Think. How did you perform? If you felt like you could have done anything better, just do it next time.
- If you have any more questions, ask them. Maybe it is a question to your teacher or whoever you was talking to. Feel free to ask!
- Continue the lesson. Unless you have a break between your classes or something similar.

Good luck talking!
